None of the military names seems to command much attention in presidential talk. Neither Pershing nor Wood has aroused great enthusiasm in the Republican party.

Just where is this note-writing going to land Germany in the peace treaty? It looks as if the allies were simply letting her waste her words for the sake of letting off venom.

At the rate the announcements are being made, it will be a rare New England college which does not decorate Major General Clarence R. Edwards with some sort of degree next month.

THE EPOCH-MAKING AIR VENTURE.

The task which was considered a few years ago nothing but a wild dream has been accomplished. To fly across the watery waste of the Atlantic ocean was held to be a fool's venture until the exigencies of the great war developed the use of the airplane to such a degree of success that experienced aviators began to realize that the trans-Atlantic flight was only a question of courage plus skill. But even so, the world looked upon the project with more or less trepidation until the development of the seaplane by the American navy seemed to remove many of the hazards of the voyage (notably the danger of being forced to alight on the water) and the employment of the wireless made it possible to summon aid from a wide area of the sea. Then the crossing from North America to Europe became practically assured. And now it is a fact.

To be sure, the more desired non-stop, straight-away flight from shore to shore of the two continents yet remains to be accomplished, but the success of the NC-4 in covering a far greater distance by zigzagging to the Azore islands gives promise that the non-stop flight will be carried out in due season. In fact, the distance covered by the American seaplanes in the flight from Trepassey, N. F., to the Azores was about two-thirds of the total distance of the route over which Hawker and Grieve attempted their disastrous non-stop flight; and the NC-4, at least, of the three machines which made the flight from Trepassey would undoubtedly have been capable of continuing far beyond the Azores had the plans called for such lengthened trip—might, indeed, have covered the mileage which Hawker and Grieve would have needed to cover in their non-stop route. It would have depended largely on the fuel-carrying capacity of the giant machine whether the 1,900 miles could have been made.

But the accomplishment of conquering the Atlantic by the air route, even though it became necessary to stop at the Azores and there await the benefit of good weather, is a most notable performance and will go far toward revolutionizing the use of the heavier-than-air machines. Incidentally, it is to the credit of American skill, ingenuity, initiative and courage that an American built machine and American operators were the first to make the flight from North America to Europe.

The Spendthrift and the Tight-Wad

Among the character types that stand out conspicuously in every community are the Spendthrift and the Tight-Wad.

They are both slaves to passion; both mentally perverted victims of false ideals. One develops nothing in his mad desire to accumulate money except a cold heart and a narrow mind; the other can see nothing in life save the quick thrill of high living which only lavish and impulsive spending can excite.

"What fools these mortals be!"—What a sad sight to see people belittling themselves in their vain attempt to defeat the inexorable laws of nature, obedience to which can only bring true happiness.

Prudent saving begets wise spending, and it is our duty as a bank to help cultivate both of these virtues.

Be neither a Spendthrift nor a Tight-Wad. Save something regularly and spend what you spend wisely. A bank account with this strong National bank will be a direct help to you to get the most out of life. Bank accounts make better men and women.

TOWN TALK

THE PROOF OF THE PUDDING IS IN THE EATING, COM'R OF AGRICULTURE SAYS: Strong Hdwe. Co.—The Loudon Cow Stall Equipment I purchased of you in July, 1917, has now been in use one year. It gives me great pleasure to report my entire satisfaction with this equipment. I do not know of a single instance of a cow being able to release herself when the stanchion was latched, and the year's trial has revealed no weakness in any part of the equipment, which leads me to believe that it will be very durable.
